Take it Outside

Now that you've redone your deck, added an outdoor kitchen and created the backyard oasis you've always dreamed of, it's time to find the perfectly appointed accessories to accent the exterior extension of your indoor décor.

By Madeleine Maccar

For the past two years, homeowners have been looking at their indoor and outdoor spaces with a renewed focus on making their houses feel more like a home that reflects their unique tastes and lifestyles. Rather than letting the walls close in, the pandemic has been an unexpected opportunity to assess your living spaces with a fresh perspective and clear vision of everything from simple refreshes to timely renovations and full-scale remodels.

Even as the region looks ahead to resuming long-delayed summer traditions like those much-needed getaways and sorely missed plans with loved ones, home improvement projects that extend all the comfort of the indoors to the outside are still on the agenda for many. And with all those new color schemes, new fixtures and new materials comes the accompanying new accessories that amplify their wow factor.

"The residual effects of the pandemic will be felt for some time—it is not like flipping a switch," says Craig Friedman of XO Appliances. "Since the pandemic, we have seen a higher priority given to enhancing spaces within the home or placing a greater emphasis on enjoying our backyards with outdoor cooking appliances."

"Outdoor dining is still blowing up," agrees Kristi Reading of The Buxton Complex. "It's not your standard picnic table: It's the nice, comfortable chairs, beautiful tables, all these different colors, and coordinating all that with your patio."

Whether you're looking for all-new items that complement your newly customized outdoor oasis or the one statement piece that will make your backyard pop, the region's experts know exactly how to help make your dreams a well-appointed reality.

Your Space, Your Taste

While some design trends of the past have erred toward the year's it-color or the must-have appointment of the seasons, personal tastes have been the real driving factor recently.

"We aren't seeing a singular specific look or product category that is outperforming another," says Bobby Huber Jr. of Oskar Huber Furniture & Design. "Each person's outdoor space is unique—be it the layout, how they want the space to function or what their design preferences/styles are."

"Individual tastes and the nature of people's homes are key drivers, but in general, there is a move to expand the home by utilizing their outdoor living space more completely," adds Friedman. "With more outdoor appliance options available, backyards are becoming a home for fire pits/tables and pizza ovens, as well as full outdoor kitchens."

Take it Outside

But there are always those items making such a splash that everyone seems to be clamoring for them.

"The hottest accessories, besides cantilever and market umbrellas, have been fire pit tables and drink coolers, and we are selling some serving carts on wheels as well," adds Bruce Halpern, owner of Tropicraft by Pavillon du Soleil. "These all add to the fun of being outside. And keeping people outside adds to the convenience of the host."

"The most popular thing we have going on right now is landscape speaker systems, which are basically a combination of multiple little satellite speakers that almost looks like outdoor lights, then you bury an 8-inch, 10-inch or 12-inch subwoofer, and it gives you a really clear, full range of sound," adds Gregg Maina of Elite Smart Home, who says it's a product that largely gets installed at new-construction homes but is a comparatively easy retrofit for homeowners looking to upgrade their backyard's wireless sound system for the summer.

With outdoor accessories and furniture being more exposed to the elements than their indoor counterparts, experts advise looking for durable pieces that are built to withstand seasons of exposure.

"In outdoor furniture, the polycomposites are a fantastic investment," Reading says. "They're no-maintenance, they don't splinter, they last forever and you can get them in all kinds of colors."

Huber notes that there are plenty of sturdy, aesthetically pleasing and even environmentally friendly materials for customers to choose from as they're selecting patio furniture: recycled poly lumber looks and feels like wood, and is guaranteed not to crack, splinter, chip, peel or rot for 20 years; cast aluminum is a superior-grade, molten aluminum alloy hand-poured into detailed moldings; wrought aluminum is reinforced at the piece's stress points for extra resiliency; faux wicker is both realistic and guaranteed to not change color for at least five years; and teak, which comes in both a natural finish and one that mimics the gray patina it develops with age.

"When it comes to cushions and fabrics, not all are created equal," he continues. "It's important to know you're buying something with a top-quality cushion."

Halpern, too, notes that comfort is king.

"The No. 1 thing, in our opinion, is comfort," he emphasizes. "If it's comfortable, you will want to sit there instead of staying inside. … Don't think of your outside furniture as being any less important than your living room [since] you will use it nearly half of the year."

"What I have heard is customers coming in saying they want something that is going to last, be comfortable, look good and can have delivered ASAP," Huber adds.

Shore-to-Please Accessories

Shore homes have been enjoying their share of upgrades and reimagined exterior appointments, too, especially as the rising popularity of working from home has encouraged many families to spend more time at their Shore houses and secondary properties.

But that salty air does do a number on certain materials, and will age your outdoor accessories faster than more inland locales will.

"At the Shore, if you don't want to spend your time doing maintenance on your furniture, stick with quality aluminum, cast or extruded, that is heavy and has a finish that's guaranteed—never buy 'metal' or 'steel' furniture, it won't hold up," Halpern points out. "The many MGP (marine grade polymer) USA-made brands like Telescope, Windward or HomeCrest will endure any weather thrown at it."

Huber agrees that MGP—"the same materials they use on boats"—is made to endure the harsh salt air. "It is a refined look that offers a wide range of colors."

As Shore homes tend to be built a little closer together than primary residences, Maina notes that the landscape speakers "stay local" since they're positioned so low, meaning that you enjoy your music without imposing on your neighbors.

"You're putting anywhere from eight to 16 speakers all around your yard, so you don't have to blast your music to hear it," he says.

With many people spending more time at their Shore houses, both for a change of scenery while working from home and to get away without going far away, people are beginning to personalize their seaside residences more like their primary ones.

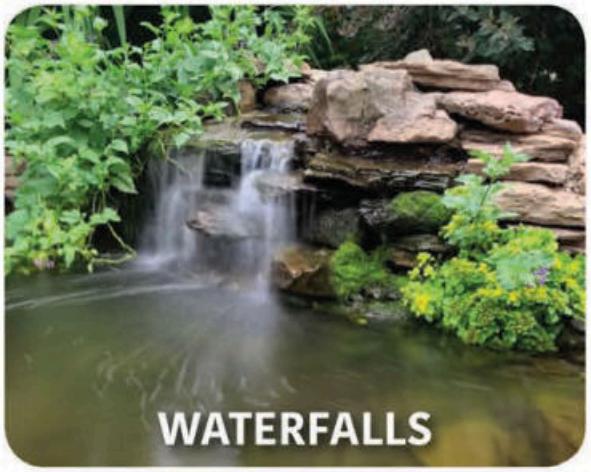

"Remote is no longer remote: What was

At Ponds By George, we bring your backyard to life. Whether it's a new pond, or a pond renovation, a new landscape, or outdoor lighting, 'We Create What Nature Forgot.' We've been creating award-winning backyards for over 32 years and absolutely LOVE what we do.

once thought of as a place to escape to has become the place we expand to, and comfort is the key regardless of the physical address," Friedman says.

Here to Help

While accessorizing your outdoor space isn't as high-stakes a project as home renovations and additions, area experts do have the insights, experience and dedicated team members to point you toward the right items, brands, colors, materials and more, plus the customer feedback they've received from previous buyers as well as their own experience with an item.

"It's really important that you work with someone who knows the product, who isn't just a salesman," Reading points out. "We all have our products in our homes, so I can tell you about a certain piece that I've had since 2006, and that it doesn't change colors or fade and how it's held up through the years."

Besides, testing out and examining accessories and pieces of furniture before you commit to them is how you avoid making potentially pricey mistakes or finding yourself saddled with an item that you're less than thrilled with.

"The only way to know if something is comfortable is to try it out—that's why we insist on having more than 100 different sets on the showroom floor," Halpern says. "Yes, it takes time to try them out, but it's worth it every day you're on your patio or deck, and it will be worth it for decades to come."

For backyard accessories that might come with a bit of a learning curve, showrooms not only offer expert demonstrations from knowledgeable staff but also can kick-start some inspiration.

"A lot of this stuff people have never heard of until they see it at someone else's house, so [a showroom] is a good place to show people all the different aspects of a product," Maina explains. "It's hard for me to explain what a smart home is, but if I demonstrate it, it starts clicking and people start realizing, 'I can do this, I can do that.' It's a great place to spur ideas."

As colors on a screen aren't always true to life and a material that seems like it would fit your outdoor décor might clash up close, visiting a showroom for an in-person, hands-on assessment of all your options is still the best way to decide what furniture and flourishes are most harmonious with your space.

"One thing that our designers can do today that they couldn't easily do five years ago is now we can continue your interior design aesthetic to the outdoor space," Huber says. "This helps create a connected look to the rest of your home that shows the cohesive design expression of the client inside and outside their home." H&H

Apex Roofing & Sheet Metal Corp.

QUALITY ROOFING IS ESSENTIAL FOR PROTECTING HOMEOWNERS AND A MAJOR INVESTMENT THAT NEEDS TO STAND THE TEST OF TIME. Apex Roofing is a small roofing outfit that specializes in metal, cedar, slate and asphalt shingles and has installed hundreds of roofs throughout the Bucks/Montgomery area, providing exceptional service and meeting clients' needs.

Many folks were looking to update during the pandemic and owners Dan Cantarella and Joe Dubyk indicate that today's customers are using their roof to increase their home's value and curb appeal.

House & Home spoke further with Cantarella and Dubyk about the importance of investing in quality materials and what homeowners should look into when the time comes for replacement.

WHAT ARE THE BENEFITS OF INVESTING IN A METAL ROOF AND HOW DOES IT DIFFERENTIATE FROM TRADITIONAL ASPHALT ROOFING?

Metal roofs are the most lightweight, watertight, wind-resistant, fire-resistant and longest-lasting roofs on the market. They are also considered more aesthetically pleasing than traditional asphalt shingle roofs. Metal roofs are versatile and can be utilized on entire houses or accent roofs, as well as additions, garages, bay windows/pent roofs. If environmental issues are important to you, our galvalume steel panels are made mostly from recycled steel and your entire roof can be recycled once it needs to be replaced again (in 50-60 years). Metal roofs are historically cohesive and can go on older houses and barns, but also give newer homes a style boost. We always tell customers it can make your house "pop" without making it look gaudy.

WHAT CAN YOU TELL US ABOUT CEDAR ROOFING AND WHY IT'S BECOME SO POPULAR RECENTLY?

Wooden roofs can be traced all the way back to the Colonial days. Depending on the region, different woods were used, but by the late 1800s cedar shakes were the preferred material and could be found on many government and park buildings. Even as newer materials came out over the next few centuries, cedar has remained popular because of the beauty and historical pride of Colonial America.

ARE THERE MAJOR COST DIFFERENCES AMONG ASPHALT, METAL AND CEDAR ROOFS AND WHICH ONE DO YOU FIND CUSTOMERS ARE GRAVITATING TOWARD?

Indeed! Asphalt shingles offer the most bang for the buck as the other roofing systems are much more costly. That said, metal has become extremely popular over the last 25 years and the trend is continuing to get stronger. However, there will always be a market for cedar and slate because of the rich history many homeowners wish to preserve in our area.

ASIDE FROM THE MATERIALS, ARE THERE ANY OTHER TRENDS YOU ARE SEEING WITH WHAT CLIENTS ARE LOOKING FOR WHEN GETTING A NEW ROOF INSTALLED?

Certain colors will trend for years then seemingly, out of nowhere, other colors will get hot and take the lead. Right now black and dark grays are extremely popular. A few years ago, light and medium browns could not get off the shelf fast enough.

HAVE DISRUPTIONS TO THE GLOBAL SUPPLY CHAIN AND THE RISING COST OF MATERIALS CAUSED ANY INTERRUPTIONS TO YOUR BUSINESS?

Certain colors of asphalt were hard to get or stopped from production altogether. Copper is in short supply, and global inflation has made cedar particularly more expensive than it already is. We are fortunate we've been able to work around any disruptions and keep our customer base happy. It always helps having incredibly understanding customers who get the circumstances and work with us to come up with solutions to any snag.

WITH SO MANY FOLKS LOOKING TO UPGRADE THEIR HOMES DURING THE PANDEMIC, HOW MUCH CAN A NEW ROOF BOOST CURB APPEAL?

A lot. It's hard to put a dollar value on it, but I can say most roofs we install are not the "it's so old and has to be replaced because it's leaking badly" variety. So that indicates that today's customers are using their roof to increase their home's value and curb appeal. H&H

Set Up Your Space for Summer

At Sequoia Out Back, customers can find endless inspiration for their outdoor dreams.

It's safe to say that the pandemic has taught us to appreciate the outdoors even more. While backyard outdoor living areas have been soaring in popularity for years now, for many, the stay-at-home orders and the experience of being stuck indoors for so long have made homeowners absolutely crave these spaces more than ever. They are truly a must-have—a fact that's been increasingly evident at Sequoia Out Back, where owner John Keller says that he's seeing even more people come into the showroom than ever before.

From the moment that homeowners walk through Sequoia Out Back's front doors, the experience is really unlike any other. The 30,000-square-foot showroom has everything you could want for your personal oasis on display so that you can envision it in your own backyard.

When you walk through a typical patio store or a big-box store, items aren't usually set up or paired together the way they would be in your backyard so it can be difficult to visualize your finished space. At Sequoia, you can see an entire outdoor living space the way that you might set it up on your own patio. It inspires so many ideas.

The goal of the showroom has always been to make homeowners feel like they're stepping into a real-life outdoor space. This helps homeowners to make the best choices when it comes to furniture and decking supplies that will work for their own projects.

Pair these gorgeous displays with the knowledgeable and helpful team members who are ready to assist—and homeowners can really appreciate the showroom visit experience. Customers always leave Sequoia with a lot of great ideas and information.

Of course, in general, inventory has been a major issue since the start of the pandemic. Homeowners who have tried to purchase furniture and decking may have noticed limited stock. But Sequoia Out Back has been fortunate to be able to keep a lot of inventory in stock thanks to its relationship with manufacturers and its purchasing power, as well as having a large quantity from the start. Even so, with so many people coming through the doors, now is the time to start planning for the spring while inventory is still available.

After all, before you know it, the weather will be consistently warm, and we'll all be spending even more time outdoors. Homeowners want to make sure their space is ready now!

"The sooner you can start planning, the better," urges Keller. "The number of visitors coming to the store right now is higher than ever for this time of year. It's definitely not too early to start thinking about setting up your outdoor space."

As you start planning, Sequoia Out Back has all of the amenities that you might want to consider. This includes fire pits, patio furniture and all of the material supplies including decking and railing and hardscaping. Sequoia works with all of the leading manufacturers including TimberTech, Wolf, Trex, Zuri and Fiberon—all of whom continue to offer innovative products.

Whether you're a do-it-yourselfer or someone who was sent by their contractor to look for materials, Sequoia's showroom can accommodate everyone.

It's all about making the experience as easy and as enjoyable as possible for homeowners. As the true outdoor living experts, Sequoia and its team are ready to help make homeowners' backyard dreams come true.

"Outdoor living has been a trend for a long time but it's hotter than ever," Keller sums up. "I think we're all ready to start spending more time outside." H&H

FAMILY-OWNED COSMOS MARBLE AND GRANITE STANDS BY CUSTOMERS THROUGH EVERY STEP OF AN INSTALLATION OR REMODELING PROJECT. by Amanda Hamm Hengel

When it comes to bath and kitchen installation and remodels, quartz is the hot item these days. Popular for its non-porous characteristics and minimal maintenance requirements, Noula Karagiorgos, who leads business development for Huntington Valley, Pennsylvania-based Cosmos Marble and Granite, says it tops the list of requested products. Quartzite and granite run a close second and third, but Karagiorgos says Cosmos now offers a product that may give all three a run for their money: porcelain.

"Porcelain is unique because it doesn't require any sealing like natural stone, and it has no heat limitation like quartz," she explains. "The porcelain countertops look like real marble, and there is no maintenance for it."

Cosmos has been certified to fabricate and install porcelain countertops for a year and a half—and is one of the few stone fabricators in the area certified to do so—and Karagiorgos says its popularity has truly taken off.

While porcelain is just starting to make its way into homes, Cosmos has been a known and trusted fabricator and installer in Huntington Valley and the surrounding areas since 1993. Family owned and operated, the company specializes in the cutting and fabrication of stone countertops, but their work is not limited to these parameters.

Projects including flooring, outdoor dining and fireplace surrounds are also part of their offerings, all of which can be done in both residential and commercial settings.

"Basically, anything you can put a countertop on, we can do," Karagiorgos notes. "Vanities, small shower pieces, shower benches. … We can do it all."

Another project customers have been requesting is a full-height backsplash, says Karagiorgos. Rather than being tiled, the backsplash is a continuation of the countertop, so there are no grout lines, and the wall becomes a stunning statement piece.

While it may be pricier to do a full-height backsplash, Karagiorgos says Cosmos has a rich in-stock inventory with products—including granite, quartz, quartzite and porcelain—to cover any budget. They also have a remnant yard where customers can find smaller pieces for parts of their project at a third of the cost, and they carry a huge supply of tile and mosaics for backsplash, wall and floor tile applications.

When it comes to the design and installation of the products, Cosmos also uses the latest technology to ensure proper cut and fit each time.

"We use a CNC cutting machine to do everything digitally," Karagiorgos says. "When we come in to a customer's home, we do a template with a laser.

"All the information is fed in to the machine digitally," she continues. "There is minimal human involvement to avoid errors."

When it comes to placing the product, all Cosmos installers have been certified for at least 10-15 years, and Cosmos prides itself on offering the most professional and experienced installation available.

This attention to detail, and commitment to customer service, is a cornerstone Cosmos has built its business on. Taking on a new installation or remodel can be time consuming and costly, and Cosmos understands this. That's why they are there to help through every step of the process, and to ensure every customer can feel as though their project is completed with the best materials and professionals available.

"These types of projects can be a lot of money for some people," Karagiorgos concludes. "We want them to know we care about them and we take the time to educate them on the product to make sure they get what they're looking for. We think it means a lot to them, and it means a lot to us." H&H

H&H LANDSCAPING

TAKING KEY STEPS NOW will have your landscaping looking its best when summer arrives.

Always be Prepared

by Matt Cosentino

Entertainment season is fast approaching, and before long homeowners will be welcoming in guests for summer barbecues and pool parties. They will surely want a yard to be proud of on these occasions, and even when there is not a special event going on, pulling into the driveway and admiring a lush, green lawn does wonders for mental health. Of course, the extreme heat of July and August can put a tremendous strain on the landscaping, which is why it is crucial for homeowners to take certain steps in the spring to ensure that they and any visitors will have a beautiful property to look at all summer long.

"You have to prepare right now with fertilization, seeding and really getting it ready to be able to take on the heat in the summer," says Michael Tarleton of TLC Landscaping. "The optimal time for growing seed is the fall, but you also have to maintain what you have and keep it where it is."

Adds Michael Pasquarello of Elite Landscaping: "Spring is the ideal time to thicken up the density of a lawn and to establish a deep root system so come summer when evapotranspiration is at its highest, the individual blades of grass can survive on less available moisture."

House & Home spoke to several local professionals to find out some helpful tips about preparing the lawn, flowers and planting beds for the harsh summer months to come.

Get a lay of the land

An important stage in the spring cleanup process is to assess the yard and see what kind of shape it is in heading into summer.

"My first suggestion would be to walk around the property and inspect your plants and your garden for any dead plant material and any dead growth on the plant material," says Chris DeMato of Rock Bottom Landscaping & Fencing. "If you have any other structures or fences or things like that, inspect everything and get a good list of what you need. Of course, you can decide what you can manage or if you need a professional to come in and take care of it.

"The next step, assuming you have dead growth, broken branches and plants that do not look well, is those portions of the plant need to be pruned off and cleaned up. Any ornamental grasses or other plants that were not cut back in the fall should be cut back before the summer season. Obviously, clean out your planting beds of any weed growth and any undesirable grass growth that has spread into the planting bed."

Often, dead leaves that were not removed during the fall have gathered in clumps around the yard and can be a hindrance to the spring awakening.

"It's very important to clean leaves thoroughly," DeMato says. "Allowing leaves to form in a planting bed or your grass can create a covered mat when they harden and settle. They essentially smother whatever they're laying on. If they're on the lawn, they're going to kill the grass, and if they're on the plant, they will smother the plant."

Do's and don'ts heading into summer

After a rough winter, there is an inclination for many homeowners to rush out the first mild weekend of the spring and immediately start thatching, aerating and seeding. But it's not always necessary.

"The fall is a more popular time to perform these tasks, however they can be beneficial to complete in the spring as well if they have not been done in a while," Pasquarello says. "Seeding is the one item I would definitely wait until the fall as you will be competing directly with any pre-emergents applied to the lawn. They will adversely affect the grass seeds in the same way as they do the weed seeds."

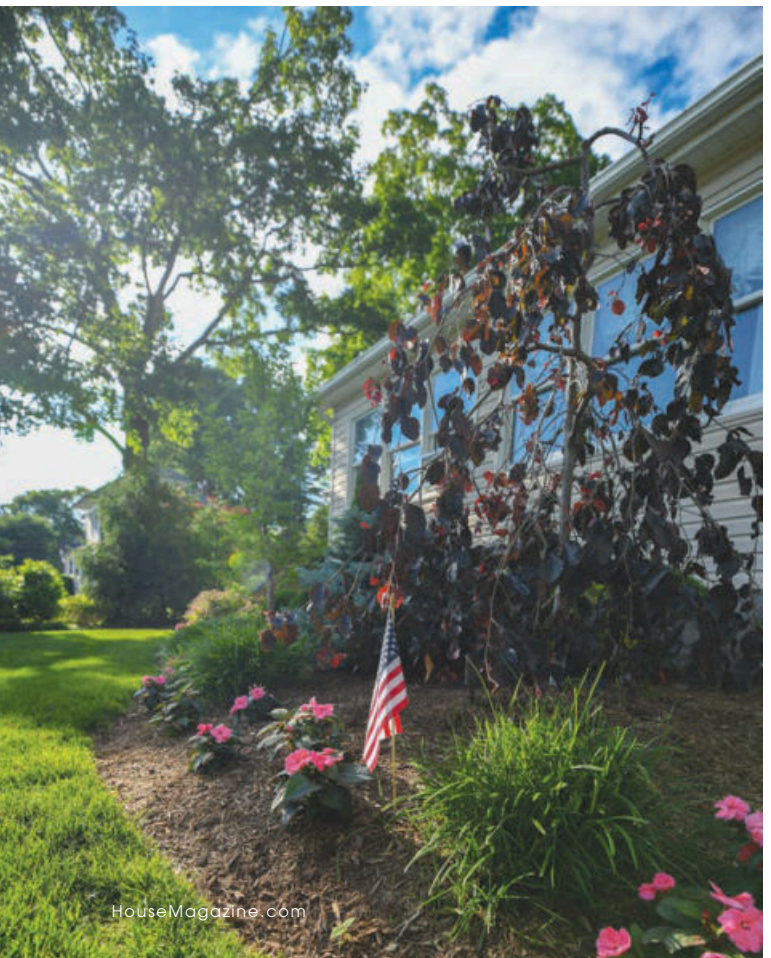

DeMato advises to not get carried away with fertilizing. Too much fertilization can actually result in less growth and leave grass and plants vulnerable to pests or disease.

"Homeowners tend to overfertilize a lot," he says. "Overfertilizing your plants and your lawn is not good; it's essentially no different than a human being overeating. You're not allowing those plants and the grass to strengthen on their own from the ground up. They don't have to search for a whole lot because you're overfeeding them."

Mulching planting beds is always a common chore in the spring, and local big-box stores and garden centers will often have sales on mulch at this time of the year. Tarleton warns to be careful about not going overboard.

"Basically, I always say clean it up, weed it and mulch it," he explains. "This way the mulch will help absorb the water and retain the water. But don't overmulch—mulch is there to help your plants, but too much mulch will kill your plants."

DeMato adds that cultivating the soil is also important. "Essentially, you take a heavy, metal garden rake and loosen your soil and mulch," he says. "This allows plant material to get the proper watering when it rains, and it also allows oxygen to get to the root system a little easier—it aerates the soil, which is very important. Cultivating means mixing and turning over your soil with a heavy metal rake and preparing your soil for growth and to allow the watering to seep in properly around the root system."

Addressing the lawn

Cutting the grass in the middle of the scorching summer can be a laborious activity, but many homeowners look forward to it at this time of year when it's not as hot. It's typically best to resume mowing in early spring.

"In our region, historically the second week of April is when lawns are due for their first haircut," Pasquarello says. "First, be sure to remove any leaves, branches and debris from the surface of the lawn in order to give the ability to breathe and cut freely."

"It depends on the lawn," adds Tarleton. "You don't want to let it get too long before you cut, because then it builds up thatch. But at the same time you don't want to cut too much where you're cutting it too short and burning it out. You have to base it on your lawn. Sometimes people cut too often but it's OK to take a week off here and there and let the lawn establish, and not just beat the lawn up by running a machine over it."

Because of the constant April showers that usually carry over to early May, homeowners must monitor their watering of the lawn.

"Overwatering is a big mistake," DeMato says. "It's the same concept as overfertilizing.

If you overwater a plant or your grass, it does not allow the root system to really strengthen up and search for the water on its own. So be very careful and be very regimented in your watering—it should be a scheduled watering system. It's a common mistake where a homeowner may miss watering for three or four days when they're newly seeding a lawn, and then they water for three hours and overwater. That's the worst thing you can do, so try to be scheduled with your watering. [Do it] every other day and make sure it's the same amount of time, and the same principle with your plants."

"Most established lawns can flourish in the early to mid spring with just the help of Mother Nature," Pasquarello agrees. "The temperatures on average are still on the cooler side and the lawn is not demanding a tremendous amount of water. [But] there still have been some very dry, hot mid-May years where you will need to crank things up a bit."

DeMato concludes that homeowners know their properties best and can use their judgment about watering, with specific areas needing more water than others.

Final touches

Most homeowners have dealt with unsightly crabgrass in July and August, which can ruin a landscape that was impeccable just a few months before. Weed control is critical in the spring.

"You should be doing preventative measures now to minimize that in the summer months," Tarleton says. "It's hard when the weather gets to be 100 degrees out; it's really tough to spray for weeds then because you can kill the grass too."

DeMato shares his recommendations for perennials and ornamental grasses.

"If you have any overgrown perennials or ornamental grasses, if you feel they're too large you can divide them," he says. "That should be done prior to the summer months. You can simply split an ornamental grass down the middle and divide it and plant the other half somewhere you may have space. You can do this with many of your perennials that will be coming in during May and June.

"Quite often there are perennials that are very flimsy and the growth is wispy," he continues. "You may want to secure them with stakes and other garden rings or plant rings. You simply stake it down over the plant and it gives a little support to those flimsy plants such as peonies, mint and delphiniums. This will encourage a much stronger root system."

Finally, Pasquarello points out that spring is always a great time to add plants or flowers to the landscape.

"Planting earlier helps flowers, shrubs and trees establish a root system and get acclimated to their new area prior to the heat setting in," he says. "They will be able to uptake water more easily when needed." H&H

Cooling off in the backyard never felt so good

DURING THE PANDEMIC, POOL OWNERSHIP SKYROCKETED as many folks spending increased amounts of time at home decided to extend those comforts to their outdoor living space. For those who may still be considering adding one to their backyard or are perhaps looking for new elements to enhance their pool, we contacted some area experts to find out what's hot and trending.

Our designer Ryan Panetta did a 3D design of the vision the customer was looking for and brought it to life. The first picture is of a natural pool setting with a grotto waterfall, a slide that was built into a rock setting with a soft planting area. Attached is a hot tub that was placed into the pool, which helps gives it a warm, spa feeling.

We also did a 3D design and installation for a relaxing backyard area with a fireplace and outdoor grill area. Everyone has different ideas of what they want for their home oasis and it's a great opportunity to become a part of their vision and to see it brought to life.

Integrating a water slide into a rock waterfall grotto is a superb design approach. The kids can engage in sun-splashed fun while the grown-ups enjoy the eye-catching, multi-level stone structure.

This year's pool-building season was unusually busy. It seems that many people are still planning to spend more time at home, less foreign travel, fewer kids going to summer camps, etc.; all of which make it more attractive to own a pool.

Clients are looking at incorporating some upgrades such as sun shelves (a shallow area in the pool that is suitable for a lounge chair or play area for kids), upgraded coping to granite or stone, and stamped concrete for patios and walkways. Salt chlorine generators that turn salted water into chlorine are also becoming very popular due to the high cost and scarcity of chlorine.

We believe that this trend of spending more time at home will continue with folks working from home several days a week as well as the high cost of vacation travel and summer camps for the kids.

The footprint of this pool was small, the access limited and we were building on a combination of sandy soil and mud with hydrostatic pressures that fluctuate with local tides. Did we mention the pool needed to be anchored to grade beams that attached to pilings driven 30 feet into the ground?

We started from a drawing on a piece of paper and finished with an architectural gem the owners use daily. The 12-by-22-foot pool is a walkout from the house and overlooks the bay. It is fully automated with bubbler lights, a raised spillover spa, travertine coping and an automatic vacuum system.
